MARKED DECREASE OF INFLUENZA; 812 NEW CASES

Encouraging to Note the Death Rate Is Still Low, Declares Assistant Health Commissioner.

830 CASES WERE REPORTED YESTERDAY

Several Moving Picture Shows Are Closed by Health Authorities for Violating the Regulations.

The number of new cases of influenza for the 24 hours ending at 11 a. m. today was 812. There were 830 new cases reported yesterday. Both days showed a marked decrease in the number on Saturday, when there were 1159 new cases.

Of the new cases tabulated today, 381 were among children. The total number of cases since the beginning of the emergency now is 22,363.

There were 17 deaths from influenza yesterday and 10 from pneumonia, making the totals 1132 from influenza and 531 from pneumonia. "It is encouraging to note that the death rate still is low," Assistant Health Commissioner Jordan said. "Reports from inspectors who rode street cars Saturday afternoon and Sunday indicate that the United Railways and its car crews are endeavoring to live up to the rule compelling them to keep open ventilators and confine the number of passengers on each car to 20 in excess of the car's seating capacity."

Some Movie Houses Penalized.

Five moving picture theaters were closed yesterday by Assistant Health Commissioner Jordan for violations of the rules of the Health Department regarding their operation. Moving picture theaters are required to deny admittance to children under 16 years and to obtain permits from the Health Department for their operation. The following theaters were closed: Majestic, Eleventh street and Franklin avenue; Famous, Franklin avenue, between Sixth and Seventh streets; Ratina, 2010 Market street; Casino, 1528 Market street, and Star, Jefferson avenue and Market street.

Two, the Majestic and Casino, were permitted to reopen later in the day, their infraction of the rules, having been slight and ventilation of the theaters appearing good. Many business and social events have been canceled because of the order against unnecessary gatherings. Among them are the annual reception to members of the Chamber of Commerce set for tonight at the City Art Museum, a lecture by Prof. Holmes Smith at the auditorium of the Washington University Medical School tonight, and the annual dinner of the St. Louis Contemporary Club at Hotel Statler tonight.

Wife of Busy Bee Proprietor Dies of Pneumonia.

Mrs. Rose Candy, wife of Walter W. Candy, president of the Busy Bee Candy Co., died yesterday at 2 a. m. in her home, 4 Kingsbury place, of pneumonia following influenza. The remainder of the family, consisting of Candy, his sisters, Miss Elizabeth Candy, and his two sons, Walter and William, also have had influenza, but all appear to have recovered.

AMERICAN TROOPS ENTER PRUSSIA; POPULACE CALM

Apparent That Even Children Had Been Schooled Carefully to Display Air of Absolute Indifference.

TREVES REACHED IN 12-MILE ADVANCE

Headquarters to Be in City on Moselle—Discharged German Soldiers Seen on Line of March.

By the Associated Press. AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION, Sunday, Dec. 1.—No demonstrations, either friendly or hostile, marked the entry of Major-General Dickman's army into Germany today. The frontier was crossed early in the day and by nightfall the Americans had moved forward 12 miles, reaching Radgen on the left and Saarbrücken on the right. The line extended along the Saar River and through Saarburg and Treves.

The reception given the Americans differed from that encountered in Luxembourg and parts of Belgium and France. There they were welcomed as deliverers by almost all of the population. The attitude of the population of Rhinish Prussia was different. Not a single act of open antagonism was reported, but it was evident that even the children had been schooled carefully in the role they must play.

Officers and men were not surprised by the lack of display of flags and the absence of the cheering crowds to which they have become accustomed, but they did not expect the calmness with which the advance patrols and the columns of marchers were received.

Blinds of Homes Drawn. On the Luxembourg side of the Moselle River the streets of the villages were filled with those out to say good-by to the departing troops or by those who paused to or from church. Across the Moselle the streets of the villages were almost deserted. Perhaps 85 per cent of the population remained within their homes and in a majority of cases the blinds were drawn. Here and there a German stood in the doorway watching the troops pass and occasionally groups assembled at street corners, but there were no signs of either pleasure or disapproval.

Larger crowds were encountered in Treves, the largest place occupied, later in the day, but even there the people kept moving, maintaining a studied air of indifference. So far as possible, the men in khaki were ignored. Once in a while the youngsters under 6 years of age were carried away by the excitement and displayed enthusiasm over the marching troops, but their forgetfulness was corrected promptly by some older person.

Text of President Wilson's Address to Congress Today

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Following is the text of President Wilson's address delivered to Congress today:

Gentlemen of the Congress: The year that has elapsed since I last stood before you to fulfill my constitutional duty to give to the Congress from time to time information on the state of the union has been so crowded with great events, great processes and great results that I cannot hope to give you an adequate picture of its transactions or of the far-reaching changes which have been wrought in the life of our nation and of the world.

We have a surfeit of these things, as I have. It is too soon to assess them; and we who stand in the midst of them and are part of them are less qualified than men of another generation will be to say what they mean or even what they have been. But some great outstanding facts are unmistakable and constitute in a sense part of the public business with which it is our duty to deal.

To state them is to set the stage for the legislative and executive action which must grow out of them and which we have yet to shape and determine.

A year ago we had sent 145,918 men overseas. Since then we have sent 1,850,612, an average of 152,542 each month, the number, in fact, rising in May last to 245,951. In June to 278,760, in July to 307,182 and continuing to reach similar figures in August and September—in August 288,570 and in September 257,438. No such movement of troops ever took place before, across 3000 miles of sea, followed by adequate equipment and supplies, and carried safely through extraordinary dangers of attack—dangers which were alike strange and infinitely difficult to guard against. In all this movement only 758 men were lost by enemy attacks—630 of whom were upon the sea, and the rest in the shipyards, on the railways, at the docks, on the sea, in every labor that was needed to sustain the battle lines, men have vied with each other to do their part and do it well. They can look any man-at-arms in the face and say, we also strove to win and gave the best that was in us to make our fleets and armies sure of their triumph.

And what shall we say of the women—of their devotion, their intelligence, their capacity for organization and co-operation, which gave their action discipline and enhanced the effectiveness of everything they entered into? We are at tasks to which they had never before set their hands, their utter self-sacrifice alike in what they did and in what they gave? Their contribution to the great result is beyond appraisal. They have added a new luster to the annals of American womanhood.

The least tribute we can pay them is to make them the equals of men in political rights as they have proved themselves their equals in every field of practical work. They have entered, whether for themselves or for their country. These great days of completed achievement would be sadly marred were we to omit that act of justice. Besides the immense practical services they have rendered, the women of the country have been the moving spirits in the systematic economies by which our people have voluntarily assisted to supply the suffering peoples of the world and the armies upon every front with food and everything else that we had that might serve the common cause. The details of such a story can never be fully written, but we carry them at our hearts and thank God that we can say that we are the kinsmen of such.

And now we are sure of the great triumph for which every sacrifice was made. It has come, come to the completion, and with the pride and inspiration of these days of achievement quick within us we turn to the tasks of peace again—a peace secure against the violence of irresponsible monarchs and ambitious military coteries and made ready for a new order, for new foundations of justice and fair dealing.

We are about to give order and organization to this peace, not only for ourselves, but for the other peoples of the world as well, so far as they will suffer us to serve them. It is international justice that we seek, not domestic safety merely. Our thoughts have dwelt of late upon Europe, upon Asia, upon the Near and the Far East, very little upon the acts of peace and accommodation that wait to be performed at our own doors. While we are adjusting our relations with the rest of the world it is not of capital importance that yet all shall be forgot, but he'll remember with advantages what he did that day.

What we all thank God for with deepest gratitude is that our men went in force into the line of battle just at the critical moment, when the whole fate of the world seemed to hang in the balance, and threw their fresh strength into the ranks of freedom in time to turn the whole tide and sweep of the fateful struggle—turn it once for all, so that thenceforth private wars, wars for their enemies, always back, never again forward. After that it was only a scant four months before the commanders of the Central Empires knew themselves beaten; and now their very empires are in liquidation. And throughout it all how fine the spirit of the nation was; what unity of purpose, what untiring zeal. What elevation of purpose ran through all its splendid display of strength, its untiring accomplishment. I have said that those of us who stayed at home to do the work of organization and supply will always wish that we had been with the men whom we sustained by our labor, but we can never be ashamed. It has been an inspiring thing to be here in the midst of fine men who had turned aside from every private interest of their own and devoted the whole of their trained capacity to the tasks that supplied the sinews of the whole great undertaking.

The patriotism, unselfishness, the thorough-going devotion and distinguished labors that marked their toilsome labors, day after day, month after month, have made them fit mates and comrades of the men in the trenches and on the sea. And not the men here in Washington only. They have but directed the vast achievements. Throughout innumerable factories, upon innumerable farms, in the depths of coal mines and iron mines and copper mines, enemy attacks—630 of whom were upon the sea, and the rest in the shipyards, on the railways, at the docks, on the sea, in every labor that was needed to sustain the battle lines, men have vied with each other to do their part and do it well. They can look any man-at-arms in the face and say, we also strove to win and gave the best that was in us to make our fleets and armies sure of their triumph.

The least tribute we can pay them is to make them the equals of men in political rights as they have proved themselves their equals in every field of practical work. They have entered, whether for themselves or for their country. These great days of completed achievement would be sadly marred were we to omit that act of justice. Besides the immense practical services they have rendered, the women of the country have been the moving spirits in the systematic economies by which our people have voluntarily assisted to supply the suffering peoples of the world and the armies upon every front with food and everything else that we had that might serve the common cause. The details of such a story can never be fully written, but we carry them at our hearts and thank God that we can say that we are the kinsmen of such.

And now we are sure of the great triumph for which every sacrifice was made. It has come, come to the completion, and with the pride and inspiration of these days of achievement quick within us we turn to the tasks of peace again—a peace secure against the violence of irresponsible monarchs and ambitious military coteries and made ready for a new order, for new foundations

Wilson at Sea to Keep in Touch With U. S. by a Powerful Wireless

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. NEW wireless apparatus, said to be the most powerful carried by any vessel, has been installed on the American transport George Washington, so that President Wilson can keep in constant touch with Washington during his voyage to Brest.

The day following the opening of the regular December session, but the joint session was arranged for today so that the President might hasten his departure for Europe.

Paris Council to Go in Body to Meet President.

By the Associated Press. PARIS, Saturday, Nov. 30.—The Municipal Council of Paris has decided to go in a body on the arrival of President Wilson to present him the good wishes and welcome of the people of Paris. The Council expressed a wish that the day be made a national holiday.

RESOLUTION INTRODUCED TO SEND SENATORS TO FRANCE

Cummins Proposes to Senate That 4 Democrats and 4 Republicans Go to Watch Peace Conference.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Senator Cummins of Iowa, Republican, introduced today a resolution proposing that a Senate committee of four Democrats and four Republicans be sent to France for the peace conference to keep the Senate informed on questions arising therefrom.

Senator Kellogg of Minnesota, Republican, declared he would oppose the resolution and he hoped it would be sent to the Foreign Affairs Committee and there killed.

On motion of Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, the resolution was referred to that committee. Except for the statement of Senator Kellogg, there was no discussion of the merits of the measure.

The Military Governor for occupied territory, has established his headquarters at Treves, which also has been made advanced general headquarters.

Gen. Pershing will spend part of his time at Treves. Civil affairs will be directed by Major-General Harry Smith.

The troops marched into the headquarters town with bands playing, but even the music and the presence of dozens of high ranking American officers failed to jar the population from its attitude of calm silence.

A curious feature of the situation was the presence along the line of march of large numbers of discharged German soldiers, both officers and men, still in full uniform. Along the roads and in Treves these gray-clad men moved in and out of the groups of men in khaki or stood on the sidewalks watching the marching columns. At several places in the city and in the country districts Germans, armed with rifles, were seen acting as civilian guards. They had been placed there by the German authorities to maintain order.

A number of released allied soldiers appeared with the American line as it advanced. Some of them had been set free by the retreating Germans, while others had been permitted to escape.

The allied commissions which have been in communication with the Germans have notified the local authorities, both in Treves and in other places that where the civilian authorities are not troublesome and where they co-operate with the forces of occupation, they will be permitted to remain at their posts and will not be disturbed, except in so far as is necessary for the carrying out of military measures.

Treves (or Trier) is on the right bank of the Moselle River, 57 miles southwest of Coblenz. It is perhaps the oldest town in Germany, and is rich in Roman relics. Among the main objects of interest in the town are the theater, which is one of the oldest in Germany, and the provincial museum, with a fine collection of antiquities.

Treves became an Archepiscopal See in the ninth century and the Archbishop rose to the position of Prince and occupied a place among the imperial electors. Near the close of the sixteenth century it was recognized as a free imperial city and the ecclesiastical principality was wiped out in the French revolution.

The city and the territory surrounding it were assigned to Prussia by the Congress of Vienna. The population at the outbreak of the war was about 60,000.

WORKERS' COUNCIL DEMANDS EARLY GERMAN ASSEMBLY

Body Adopts Resolution at Meeting in Reichstag Chambers; Silesia Also Calls for Early Vote.

SOME OBJECTION TO BALLOT ON FEB. 16

Majority Socialists and Bourgeois Party Declared to Believe Date Called for Is Too Early.

By the Associated Press. PARIS, Dec. 2.—The German Reichstag will be convoked shortly, according to newspapers in South Germany, says a Zurich dispatch to L'Information.

By the Associated Press. BERLIN, Saturday, Nov. 30.—Four thousand noncommissioned officers, at a mass meeting today, adopted a resolution calling upon the Government to end the Bolshevik agitation of Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, and demanding the convocation of a national assembly.

Philipp Scheidemann, the majority Socialist leader, was the chief speaker. He pointed out the difficulties the Government was having because of the irresponsibility of the elements he characterized as irresponsible elements. He warmly championed the idea of calling a constituent assembly.

The Spartacus group of ultra-radicals announced today that it would hold six meetings on Sunday.

By the Associated Press. BERLIN, Sunday, Dec. 1.—A resolution favoring the convening of the National Assembly at the earliest possible moment was passed by a meeting of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council at the Reichstag Chambers yesterday. Out of the 300 in attendance only two voted against the resolution. The meeting was orderly.

Majority Socialists and Bourgeois Object to Election on Feb. 16.

In the opinion of the Majority Socialists and the Bourgeois, according to Die Freiheit, the date Feb. 16, fixed by the Council of People's Commissioners for holding an election to the Constituent Assembly, is too early. It is maintained that more time is needed to put into effect a pure Socialist policy.

The Independent Socialists have stated that the threatened assembly of the Rhine Province and Bavaria makes it imperative that an early election be held. The Bourgeois and Socialist press agree that the Soldiers' and Workmen's Congress, which meets Dec. 16, will accept the election date.

Delegates to the congress will be chosen in haphazard fashion. The Berlin Executive Committee of the Soldiers and Workmen's Council, which called the congress, is said to have quarters to have little authority outside Berlin. The committee, it is declared, is not able to put into effect regulations which would be universally observed regarding the manner of choosing delegates.

Anybody at any place calling itself a Soldiers and Workmen's Council will be able to send delegates. The control of credentials will be difficult and this has led to fears in certain sections that the congress will be packed.

Even optimists are discouraged by the apathetic attitude of the Bourgeois and the untimely activity of the Spartacus group, or Radicals.

Silesia Demands Immediate Constitutional Assembly.

By the Associated Press. COPENHAGEN, Sunday, Dec. 1.—The people's Council at Breslau sent an ultimatum to the German Government demanding immediate convocation of the constituent assembly and threatening that Silesia would separate from Prussia unless a satisfactory answer is received within 48 hours.

Von Hindenburg Said to Support Government.

GERMAN AUSTRIA PICKS DR. SOLF AS PEACE DELEGATE

Credentials Are Handed to German Foreign Secretary — Dumba in Zurich as Peace Representative.

CHARLES PICTURED AS A VERY POOR MAN

Former Emperor, Accused of Robbing Government, Is Said to Have Never Known of So-Called "Army Pay."

By the Associated Press. BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Sunday, Dec. 1.—Dr. Hartmann today handed to Dr. W. S. Solf, the German Foreign Secretary, credentials to the peace conference as representative of the German-Austrian republic.

Dr. Solf, on receiving Dr. Hartmann, said he was deeply impressed by the decision of German-Austria to join Germany, as this was the long-forgotten desire of Germany.

Dumba in Zurich as Delegate of Austrian Peace Association.

By the Associated Press. ZURICH, Sunday, Dec. 1.—Dr. Constantin Theodor Dumba, former Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to the United States, has arrived here as delegate of the United Committee of the Austrian Peace Association. His main purpose is to present to the Entente Powers the views of his constituents who are seeking to prevent the incorporations of the German sections of Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia in the Czechoslovak State and the Italianization of the middle Tyrol, which Austrian pacifists believe would stultify the League of Nations by creating a German Irredenta.

After a lengthy historical argument, in which the German sections should remain German, Dr. Dumba says: "In her deep sorrow Austria can only appeal to the high sense of equity of President Wilson. She sincerely hopes that the allies will uphold the principle of equal justice for the small and great Powers—the principle which led to their victory."

Dr. Dumba advocates the United States and Great Britain sending one regiment each as a symbol of order which now is precariously maintained. He says pillaging and burning of wealthy homes is going on in the Hungarian Plains, which should be policed by strong allied forces.

CACHED AUTO TIRES LEAD TO ARREST OF 2 MEN AT CLAYTON

Lang and Ellington Say They Were Hired to Get Tires by Man They Know.

William Lang, 37 years old, of 1401 1/2 N. 1st street, and Harry Ellington, 25, of 5132 McKissock avenue, were arrested on the Gibson road, near the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad tracks, at 2 a. m. today when they started loading 30 automobile tires, which had been cached there, into an automobile. The arrests were made by Frank Foelle, a deputy sheriff of St. Louis County, and two men whom he had deputized to stand guard over the tires after learning they were hidden there.

Lang and Ellington are being held in the county jail at Clayton. The tires, valued at $1050, and the automobile, also are being held. The two prisoners say a man whom they did not know hired them to bring the tires into St. Louis. The automobile bore a State license tag issued to a man in Eureka, Mo., and a city license tag issued to a resident of St. Louis.

any inquiry that may be instituted and any aid that may be offered. It will be of serious consequence to the country to be told exactly.

The ordinary and normal processes of private initiative will not, however, provide immediate employment for all of the men of our returning armies. Those who are of trained capacity, those who are skilled workmen, those who have acquired familiarity with established businesses, those who are ready and willing to go to the farms, all those whose aptitudes are known or will be sought out by employers will find no difficulty. It is safe to say, in finding places and employment. But there will be others who will find no such ease. There will be a large floating residuum of labor which should not be left wholly to shift for itself. It seems to me important, therefore, that the development of public works of every sort should be resumed, in order that opportunities should be created for unskilled labor in particular, and that plans should be made for the development of our unused lands and our natural resources as we have hitherto lacked stimulation to undertake.

I particularly direct your attention to the very practical plans which the Secretary of the Interior has developed in his annual report and before your committees for the reclamation of arid, swamp and cutover lands which might, if the states were willing and able to co-operate, redeem some 300,000,000 acres of land for cultivation. There are said to be 15,000,000 or 20,000,000 acres of land in the West, at present arid, for whose reclamation water is available. If properly conserved, there are about 230,000,000 acres from which the forests have been cut, but which have never yet been cleared for the plow and which lie waste and desolate. These lands are in the hands of the United States and the Italianization of the middle Tyrol, which Austrian pacifists believe would stultify the League of Nations by creating a German Irredenta.

After a lengthy historical argument, in which the German sections should remain German, Dr. Dumba says: "In her deep sorrow Austria can only appeal to the high sense of equity of President Wilson. She sincerely hopes that the allies will uphold the principle of equal justice for the small and great Powers—the principle which led to their victory."

mination of the taxes that are to be levied for 1919, 1920 and 1921. As much of the burden of taxation must be lifted from business as sound methods of financing the Government will permit, and those who conduct the great essential industries of the country must be told exactly.

Must be told as exactly as possible what obligations to the Government they will be expected to meet in the years immediately ahead of them. It will be of serious consequence to the country to delay removing all uncertainties in this matter a single day longer than the right processes of debate justify. It is idle to talk of successful and confident business reconstruction before those uncertainties are resolved.

If the war had continued it would have been necessary to raise at least $3,000,000,000 by taxation payable in the year 1919, but the war has ended and I agree with the Secretary of the Treasury that it will be safe to reduce the amount to $6,000,000,000. An immediate rapid decline in the expenses of the Government is not to be looked for. Contracts for war supplies will, indeed, be rapidly canceled and liquidated, but their immediate liquidation will make heavy drains on the treasury for the months just ahead of us.

The maintenance of our forces on the other side of the sea is still necessary. A considerable proportion of those forces must remain in Europe during the period of occupation, and those which are brought home will be transported and demobilized at heavy expense for months to come. The interest on our war debt must of course be paid and provision made for the retirement of the obligations of the Government which represent it. But these demands will of course fall much below what a continuation of military operations would have entailed and six billions would suffice to supply a sound foundation for the financial operations of the year.

I entirely concur with the Secretary of the Treasury in recommending that the $2,000,000,000 needed in addition to the $4,000,000,000 provided by existing law be obtained from the profits which have accrued and shall accrue from war contracts and distinctively war business, but that these taxes be confined to the war profits accruing in 1918, or in 1919, from business originating in war contracts. I urge your acceptance of his recommendation that provision be made now, not subsequently that the taxes to be paid in 1920 should be reduced from $5,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000. Any arrangements less definite than these would add elements of doubt and confusion to the critical period of industrial readjustment.

The one conclusion that I am ready to state with confidence is that it would be a disservice alike to the country and to the owners of the railroads to return to the old conditions of restraint without development. There is nothing affirmative or helpful about them. What the country chiefly needs is that all its means of transportation should be developed, its railways, its waterways, its highways, and its countryside roads. Some new element of policy, therefore, is absolutely necessary—necessary for the service of the public, necessary for the release of credit to those who are administering the WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The official casualty list given out today records 3175 army casualties, the largest number in any single day's list thus far. The War Department has issued a recapitulation of names thus far listed, including yesterday's figures, showing a total of 101,572 for the army. The addition of today's figures increases this to 104,747. The Marine Corps' latest total, 4212, makes an aggregate of 108,959. This is 41 per cent of the total number to be listed, which, by the revised announcement made Saturday, is approximately 264,886. About 75 per cent of the entire number of deaths has been listed, this total being 56,478 by the revised figures.

Today's list is classified as follows: Killed in action, 807; died of disease, 440; died from accident and other causes, 36; died from airplane accident, 2; missing in action, 372; wounded severely, 535; wounded, degree undetermined, 545; wounded, degree undetermined, 545; names from St. Louis and vicinity, Missouri and Illinois outside of Chicago and suburbs, are:

MAURETANIA ARRIVES WITH 4000 MEN FROM OVERSEAS; ADMIRAL MAYO ON BOARD

Troops From England Will Be Transferred to Camp Mills Today—Two More Vessels
With 2595 Men Sail From Liverpool.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The British steamship Mauretania, sister ship of the Lusitania, is in port today with the first large contingent of American troops from overseas. The 4205 men aboard, according to a statement by the military authorities, include 150 wounded men from the battlefields of France. They will be taken to Camp Mills on Long Island during the day. Demobilization will take place at this camp in the near future.

When the big liner left Gravesend Bay for her North River pier, Mayor Hylan and his party were aboard. The Mayor announced that Secretary of War Baker had died his last request that the troops parade in New York before going to camp.

A tremendous chorus of whistles from every manner of craft broke loose as the Mauretania steamed slowly up the harbor. The liner was escorted by a multitude of flags. Her hulls were lined with cheering, gesticulating soldiers.

Heavy storms delayed the giant transport's voyage so that she was unable to dock at noon yesterday, as was expected, and it was not until 7 o'clock last night that the liner entered the Narrows, too late to pass quarantine. She anchored for the night in Gravesend Bay, in sight of the Lighted Statue of Liberty.

The steamer's belated arrival caused a change in the plans for welcoming the soldiers, and many thou-

POLICEMAN NOTES HOTEL ROBBERS' AUTO

Three Men Arrested After Robberies at Smee's and at Betty Ray's Place.

The habit of Patrolman Kosche of putting down on his cuffs the license numbers of automobiles he sees standing on the streets on his beat at late hours in the night and morning led today to the arrest of three men accused of two robberies in which they obtained money and jewels amounting to about $1035.

The first of the two robberies, about 5 o'clock this morning, occurred in the home of Betty Ray, negro, residing at 617 North Leonard street. The Ray woman was beaten by three men, who entered her house and took $150 in cash and diamonds valued at $500. In reporting the robbery she told the police she recognized one of the men as a man she knew as "Yore".

The second robbery occurred about 6 o'clock at Smee's Hotel, 2942 Olive street, where the thieves forced their way into the room of the wife of the proprietor of the place, Mrs. John Smee, according to her statement to the police, and took from her $70 in cash and diamonds valued at $400.

While the Smee robbery was taking place, Patrolman Kosche, passing in front of the hotel, saw the robbers' automobile standing in front of the building and from force of habit wrote the license number on his cuff.

He walked on and when about a block from the place saw three men enter the machine and drive away. Soon he learned of the robbery and a call was sent to every police district and a hunt for the auto he had seen before the hotel was started.

Automobile policemen came upon the machine two hours later in front of a saloon at 2900 Olive street. They entered the saloon and found three men at the bar. As they approached the trio one of the men, according to McKenna, drew a revolver and showed fight. The policemen leaped on him and gave him a beating in disarming him.

The men when taken to the police station gave their names as John Eick of 1371 Shawmut place, Larry Roy, Clayton and Peter Brown of 3912 Washington avenue.

The diamonds taken from the women were not found by the police and a search of the saloon where the suspects were arrested was ordered in the belief that the jewelry might have been thrown away there when the policemen entered the place. Eick had $170 in his pockets and Yore had $30.

SLAYER ON PAROLE LIST
DES MOINES, Mo., Dec. 2.—Gov. Harding has ordered a commutation of the life sentence of L. R. Vanasse, a school teacher in Chickasaw County, who in 1916 was committed to the penitentiary at Fort Madison on conviction of having murdered his wife by poisoning.

The commutation from life to 55 years by the Governor places him on a parole basis, and his subsequent parole is looked for.

ther, William Hill of 1019 South Cardinal avenue. He worked as a teamster for contractors before he was drafted in the first local contingent.

Gustave H. Bauer, 31, of B Company, 156th Infantry, died from wounds Oct. 24, according to a notification to his brother, John G. Bauer, of 14 Louisiana avenue. He was formerly employed in the Fur-nace Mills, and was drafted in August.

Men Reported Missing.
Corp. Harris Ziegler, 25, of H Company, 138th (St. Louis) Infantry, is missing since Oct. 3, according to a notice received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ziegler of 5666 Cabanne avenue. They have received no direct word from him since the Argonne battle in the last week of September.

Corp. Ziegler was a close friend of Corp. Stimson W. Goddard of the same company, son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Goddard of 5450 Vernon avenue. Corp. Goddard's parents were notified a few days ago that he was missing since Oct. 2, and they, too, have had no direct word from him since the Argonne battle.

Both families are hoping that the relatives of other soldiers may be able to give them some information received in letters, as to their missing men. Corp. Ziegler was a traveling salesman for Butler Bros. before he enlisted in the Fifth Missouri in May, 1917.

Jack, 18, of I Company, 138th Infantry, whose death in action in the Meuse fighting was announced indirectly in a cablegram of condolence to his family, is now named directly as having been killed, in a telegram from Maj. Henry W. Hobson of the same regiment, who has arrived in New York. He was the son of Mrs. James H. Wear of 412 North Union boulevard, and was a Yale graduate and an amateur athlete of note. His brothers are James H. Wear Jr., 5213 Waterman avenue and Joseph Wear of Philadelphia, and his sisters are Mrs. G. Herbert Walker and Mrs. Max Kotany.

Harry A. Parker, 24, of C Company, 163d Infantry, died of pneumonia Oct. 11, according to a notification sent to his wife, Bessie Parker of 2002 Olive street. He was employed at the Huttig Sash and Door Co. plant on woodwork for airplanes before he was drafted, last July. A brother, Charles Parker, is in the service overseas.

Negro Farm Hand Dies.
Albert O. Helenkamp of Ballwin, St. Louis County, named as having died of disease, was a negro farm laborer. No one who could be reached in the town knew the number of his regiment.

Edgar L. Mische of L Company, 354th, formerly a druggist in P. M. Nake's store on Maryland avenue, was wounded by shrapnel in the right foot in a Meuse fighting, according to a notification to his father, the Rev. C. E. Mische of Highland, Ill.

Herbert C. Erlinger of B Company, 354th, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Erlinger of Freeburg, Ill., south of Belleville, was gassed severely Aug. 10, the parents have been notified, and has been in the base hospital at Toul.

Hershel A. Kirby, 19, who resided in Prospect Park, East St. Louis, when he enlisted in the 15th Infantry, 29th and 30th regiments, was killed Sept. 11 by a fall from a train, according to a telegram received by his mother, Mrs. Viola Kirby, now of Littleton, Ind.

Ray Armstrong, 23, of the Eighty-first Machine Gun Company, Marines, son of H. H. Armstrong, 1803 Baugh avenue, East St. Louis, was severely wounded Nov. 2. He was slightly wounded July 19 in the St. Michel drive. A brother, Sergt. Albert Armstrong, is in I Company, 138th.

Jerome Speier, 24, of C Company, 154th Supply Train, was wounded in the left arm and the shoulder Sept. 29 in the Meuse fighting, and was severely wounded. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Speier of 5537 Pershing avenue, and was formerly a salesman. A brother, Harold, is in the service overseas.

James J. Maguire Jr., 26, of B Company, 138th, listed as wounded severely, has written his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Maguire of 3844 Sullivan avenue, that he was gassed and burned Sept. 29. He writes from a hospital that he "got a few Hun" before being gassed. Maguire was formerly an optical lens grinder.

Capt. Arthur V. Wear of the 356th Infantry, whose death in action in the Meuse fighting was announced indirectly in a cablegram of condolence to his family, is now named directly as having been killed, in a telegram from Maj. Henry W. Hobson of the same regiment, who has arrived in New York. He was the son of Mrs. James H. Wear of 412 North Union boulevard, and was a Yale graduate and an amateur athlete of note. PROVIDENT SOCIETY'S $150,000 DRIVE IS ON

Campaign That Will Last All Week Conducted on Lines of Its Predecessors.

The St. Louis Provident Association today opened a campaign to raise $150,000 with which to aid needy men, women and children of the city. The campaign is being conducted similarly to other recent drives, by dividing the city into districts, with a committee responsible for the canvassing of each. Headquarters is at Broadway and Pine street.

The campaign will continue through the week.

The chief work of the association has been helping families whose income was cut off by illness of wage-earners, and caring for widows and orphans unable to make a living for themselves. It gave aid to 2322 families and investigated the cases of 700 others during the year ending Oct. 31, last.

Before departing for Washington Friday, Senator Spencer issued a statement urging St. Louisans to contribute to the fund. "We are fortunate," he said, "in having an agency so fair that we can rely with confidence upon its sympathy, judgment and efficiency, and can know that every case will be handled instantly when appeals are made. Charity in these days is a business that needs prompt relief in an emergency, and investigation and adjustment for the future."

Negro civic workers are participating in the campaign, as much aid is given to negro families.

GOMPERS FEARS GRAVER DANGER THAN WAR NOW

Labor Will Take Every Step to Hold Gains It Made During Hostilities, He Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The nation is in graver danger now than at any time during the war, because peace conferences are not always dominated by a spirit of justice and democracy, declared Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor here tonight at a jubilee meeting of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy.

It had occurred before, he said, that people who had secured a certain amount of freedom in their own countries were forced to yield or yielded voluntarily these rights at the peace table.

He asserted that when the Senate ratifies a treaty with another country provisions of that treaty become a "supreme" law and added that the working classes of America who had succeeded in getting some excellent laws on the statute books would see to it that none of these rights were taken away at the peace conference.

Labor Ready to Resist.

"I say with full knowledge of the responsibilities which my words carry," continued Gompers, "that the working people of the United States will resist and make any sacrifice which may be necessary to prevent the industrial baron from riding on horseback over the mass of the people."

He asserted that a month after labor had pledged itself to support the country, President Wilson had declared war on Germany. This pledge, he said, had been kept by labor, which now is determined to demand its rights.

While asserting that labor meant to retain all it had gained during the war in better wages, better working conditions and shorter hours, Gompers said there was no intention to turn to any "patented panacea for all the ills of human kind."

He declared labor realized that "the course of the human family is one of growth and development and that utter revolution brings reaction in its wake." Gradual but steady improvement, he said, is the character of the labor movement.

Says Labor Believes in Wilson.

Gompers said that labor has implicit confidence in the leadership of President Wilson, and predicted that he "would be a tower of strength at the peace table. He warned that "all the delegates from countries sitting at the peace table and devising the terms of the treaty are not prompted by the highest spirit of freedom and justice and democracy."

The "fundamental principles of human liberty," laid down at the recent labor conference at Laredo, Tex., he declared, "should be and must be included in the treaty of peace."

"The time has gone," he asserted, "when the working people of America can again be put in shackles, that the labor of human beings is a commodity or an article of commerce."

Assessing that "all the Bolsheviks are not in the ranks of labor," Gompers assailed "those employers who wish to cut wages, to lengthen hours and take away the eight-hour day."

Recalls French Bourbons.

"It was said of the French bourgeois," he added, "that they never forgot anything and that they never learned anything. That is true of one type of men in America."

"Industrially they want to live in the year 1918-1919, but mentally they are living in the sixteenth century. They have in mind the position of Baron and serf—of master and servant."

"That may go somewhere, but it doesn't go here. Here we propose to make the condition of life such that every woman shall be a queen and every man a sovereign."

"The men of labor have the vision of the better life and better opportunities for the toilers. And endowed with this understanding of our rights as citizens of this republic we are determined to realize our fondest hopes, better now and much better for the countless millions yet unborn."

The audience adopted resolutions commending the record of labor during the war and endorsing its demands for:

"No lowering of wages or lengthening of working hours."

"Restlessness and immediate curbing of profiteering and an adjustment of the cost of living to a point commensurate with income."

"Full representation of labor on all Government boards and commissions having to do with the affairs of working people."

Tag Day for "Mile of Smiles"

On account of changes in camp locations and the demobilization plans due to the armistice, it has been found necessary to purchase a larger number of "Mile of Smiles" films than originally planned for and in order to raise the additional funds necessary, next Saturday has been set aside as Tag day by a committee of which Mrs. Theodore Benoit is chairman and Mrs. J. H. Hoskins vice chairman. Plans for this day will be completed by the committee tomorrow.

CONSERVATION WEEK BEGINS IN ST. LOUIS FOR WORLD'S RELIEF

Message From Hoover Read in Churches and May Be Had by Organizations.

Conservation week for world relief opened yesterday when St. Louis churches gave a message from Administrator Hoover. Women's clubs, fraternal organizations and foreign societies will include part of his message in their programs this week. The St. Louis campaign is under the direction of Mrs. George A. Bass.

A group of Wednesday Club women has been appointed by Mrs. Clay E. Jordan to speak at club meetings. Mrs. Roscoe D. Smith and Miss Rosalind Thomas have charge of the booking. These speakers can be engaged by applying at Food Administration headquarters, as well as copies of the message. Mrs. J. F. Murphy will have charge of speakers in Catholic organizations, and L. Leonard of Four-Minute speakers.

World relief week is necessary because part of the world is threatened by starvation. Of wheat, rye, beans, peas and rice there is enough, with economy in consumption. There are normal supplies of sugar for us if other nations retain their present short rations, but there will be a shortage if they increase their rations. There is a big shortage of all dairy products, vegetable oils and meats and also in high-protein feeds for dairy animals. We have abandoned the use of substitutes in bread, but we must practice economy in its consumption. We must conserve heavily on butter, condensed milk, fats of all kinds and meats.

47 ARRESTED IN RAID ON HOTEL

Two Soldiers Found at Market Street Resort, When Police Squad Entered.

The Model Hotel, 1505 Market street, was raided at 2:30 a. m. Sunday by Lieut. Stinger and a squad of police. In the scramble to escape, six men and two women and a negro clerk got out by way of a rear fire escape, while 27 men and 20 women were arrested and taken to Central Station.

The raid followed information that the hotel was violating the liquor laws and was a rendezvous for soldiers on their way through the city. The police were also told that young girls frequented the place.

Two probationary patrolmen were sent to the hotel at different times Saturday night, each with a woman employed by the department. They reported being able to buy beer and other liquors in the hotel.

In the raid two soldiers were found. They were released after giving the police their names. The clerk, Aubrey Grant, 23 years old, was charged with being the keeper of the place. The others were charged with frequenting.

I felt nervous and unfit to do anything. My appetite was poor. My head ached and dark specks floated before my eyes and I had dizzy spells. They helped me from the first and five or six boxes cured me of the attack."	Mrs. J. Horn, 5315 Christy Av., says: "I do a great deal of weeding in my garden and this is hard on my back. I have had backache so bad that I couldn't even stoop to tie my shoes, and when I went to straighten I would get dizzy and black specks would come before my eyes. I have always taken Doan's Kidney Pills when I have felt any of that trouble coming on and they have soon cured me in good shape."	Paul Newman, 2530 Bellegarde Av., says: "At times I suffered from weak kidneys and bladder. My back became stiff and lame and there were times when I got dizzy. I have a lot of standing to do in damp places and I blame this for bringing on the trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to help me, and of late I haven't been bothered. I am never without Doan's in the home."

I have always gained the proper relief by using Doan's Kidney Pills, and am very seldom without them in my home."	Miss Bessie Howe, 4453 Delor St., says: "About a year ago I suffered a great deal with my back. My kidneys acted irregularly and caused me a great deal of annoyance. I was sick all over and had but little ambition to do anything. I was told to try Doan's Kidney Pills and got some at Engel's drug store. They brought me relief and seemed to help my whole system generally. I gladly recommend Doan's for the benefit of other sufferers."

YOU'LL LIKE IT—THE GREAT LAKES REVUE

One Hundred Festive "Gobs" Give Mirthful Musical Show, Almost Skirtless.

"You'll like it!" So the festive "gobs" of Great Lakes Naval Training Station shout, when they see a batch of new recruits arriving. And so they might safely assure everyone who goes to see their musical revue at the Park Theater, which opened last night for the week.

You will like it—this frolic of 100 or more young Americans in blue worsted suits, with white canvas hats. It is as refreshing as a summer breeze from Lake Michigan across the big parade ground at Great Lakes Station. The music is abundant and surprisingly catchy, and in the comedy and specialties there is enough professional talent to keep things going smoothly and swiftly, and not so much as to stifle the spontaneity of fun-loving freedom.

Unlike some bodies of military and college entertainers, the Great Lakes youths have not taken to skirts in the effort to amuse. There is only one feminine part, and it is straight burlesque. Thus, the Great Lakes boys have conserved rice powder, and have spared their audiences the stale comicality of the masculine struggle with women's clothes. Instead, they appeared mostly in the garb which Uncle Sam gave them, and furnished the sort of performance they would have given for the most exacting of their mates at Great Lakes. And a very, very good show, and one most heartily to the audience's liking, it was.

Local Favorites Greeted. Jimmy O'Keefe, introduced as a St. Louis boy, and the musical author of the show, led the large and capable orchestra. He got a welcome at the proper time, but it was Harry Fender, "leading juvenile" of the Park Theater in its earlier and better days, who received the real old-home-week greeting. Harry's role of a naval Lieutenant was nothing new for him, he having served in that role in musical comedies before his country called him. He dances as well as ever, which is very joy of living and of being a "gob." The chorus puts into its singing the same vigor and freshness that the Great Lakes band, often heard on St. Louis streets, puts into its playing. "Good-by, America" is the best of its songs. The dialogue preliminaries are amusing and not too long, and introduce some of the men who shine in the feature acts later in the program. Bob Carleton, as the rookie who dreamed he was an Admiral; Benny Kubelsky, as his orderly; and Chester Rosenberg, as Clementine, the lady ambulance driver, showed themselves through comedians. The rag-time wedding scene, in which Fender and Edward H. Sobol appeared with Carleton and Rosenberg, was funnier than the routine courtship scene in the Cuban Revue of a few seasons ago. Dave Stevens gave a dialect recital of the life of a "gob."

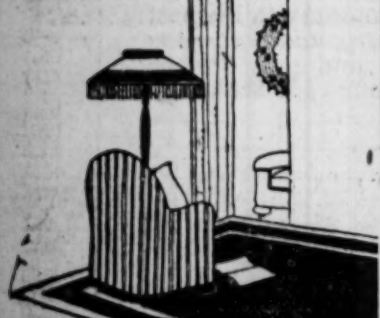

A Charming Violinist. Casser Linden, violinist, showed high professional ability, and his playing of the Berceuse from "Jocelyn" would charm any audience, as it did that at the Park. He was accompanied by a pianist named Rupp, who must be in great demand at Great Lakes, and who nearly wrecked his instrument in rendering "The Stars and Stripes Forever." A piano and violin imitation of bugle calls, and of a life and drum corps, was enjoyable. Bob Carleton also appeared as an effective piano comedian.

The proceeds of the performances go to the Navy Relief Society, which cares for the widows, orphans and children of men who die in the naval service.

Killed on Way to Be Married. August Bures, 40 years old, clerk in a hardware store, of 3305 Meramec street, was killed by a train at Sulphur Springs, Mo., last night, where he had gone to be married. News of the accident was brought here by the train crew.

Blue to Be Navigation Chief. By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Capt. Victor Blue, now commanding the superdreadnought Texas, has been selected for detail as chief of the bureau of navigation with rank of Rear Admiral. He was chief of the bureau for four years, ending in August, 1916, when he was assigned to sea duty. Secretary Daniels announced the sending of Capt. Blue's nomination to the Senate and also that of Rear Admiral David Taylor for another tour of duty as chief constructor of the navy.

Editor Has Farm Exhibit. Arthur A. Mollmann, editor of the Millstadt Enterprise, announces that he has a regular farm produce exhibition at his printing office. These were brought in this week: Head of cabbage weighing six pounds; two turnips weighing three pounds each; a beet weighing five pounds; potatoes weighing one and one-half pounds each, and a fresh radish a foot long which looks "like Kaiser Bill's face" by the time the allies get done with him after Holland kicks him out.

SHOT ON STREET NEAR HOME

Steamfitter Says He Did Not See Who Fired at Him.

Harry Morgan, 34 years old, a steamfitter and former convict, according to the police, was shot and seriously wounded late Saturday night. The shooting, he told the police, occurred on the street near his home, 705 Channing avenue. He said he did not know who fired the shot and that he saw no one when he heard the report of the revolver. The police arrested Morgan's sister, Mrs. May Tibert, at whose home he resides, and Adolph Pfeiffer, proprietor of a saloon at 701 North Channing avenue. In their investigation of the affair, it is their theory that the shooting resulted from a gang feud.

GUNPLAY AND GOLDEN

RULE IN NEW COMEDY

Once Again Virtue Swats Wickedness in "The Little Teacher."

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

IN "The Country Cousin" it was Ohio that bore the gospel of righteousness to benighted New York. In "The Little Teacher," by Harry James Smith, which came last night to the American Theater, it is Gotham which sends a missionary of sweetness and light to darkest Vermont. So much for the geography of American morals, as mapped by the evangelists of the stage.

In this successful comedy by the author of "The Tailor-Made Man" we have mingled together melodrama and the uplift, gunplay and the Golden Rule. The heroine is as quick on the trigger as she is on the Ten Commandments. And she is as precariously good, beautiful and noble as the villains are wicked, hideous and base. It is an ethical spectrum of but two colors, white and black, without ambiguous intermediary shades. How much simpler would it be in real life if the distinction between good and evil were so glaring! The play is as crude in plot as in characterization; but it makes an appeal that will not be denied. In many places, too, it is undeniably humorous; and such a mixture of sentimentality and comedy is never proffered to an American audience in vain.

Emily West, a New York girl, is set down as a school teacher in the tough but puritanical lumber village of Goshen Hollow. Naturally all of the village cats, male and female, instantly project their claws. Equally inevitably, the rowdiest lumberjack of them all, after one glimpse of the little teacher, is converted into a paragon of chivalrous knightliness, incidentally confirming once more the good old comforting theory that a man may be unable to read and write and still have the soul of a Bayard. Among the school children are a little boy and his tiny sister, who are cruelly used by their supposed parents, a drunken rough and his Sicilian wife. Emily draws a gun on the father, who adopts the children by force, and keeps possession of them until she can prove that the man and woman are kidnapers, and find the real mother of the infants.

Mary Ryan's Success.

Through all these adventures, doughty "Pug," the lumberjack, is her champion and protector. Once he removes the inebriate villain as he steals upon the teacher and the two children while she is playing a good-night song for them on a wheezy organ—removes him so expeditiously that the music is not even disturbed. Of course, he is rewarded in the end. Reappearing in khaki, he finds Emily about to start for Europe to mother orphaned French babies. They agree to go together as man and wife, as was forecast from the beginning of the play.

The comedy has three somewhat exciting moments, of which two have been mentioned. The third occurs when Emily, confronting the Sicilian woman and all the village authorities, is commanded to give up the children, and by intuition alone discovers that she is, not actually their mother. The revelation is confirmed by the boy through a means as effective as novel.

The part of the teacher was made to order for Mary Ryan, who can almost make the angelic plausible, and who can utter the staidest moral platitudes with a musical ring as if they were the newest, most thrilling things in the world. She is not ineffective at pathos and humor; but to be and look saintly is her particular forte.

Stageland must have been ransacked for its odd personalities to provide the crew of villagers included in the cast, and the costumes are as freakish as they. There are four or five child actors, one of them a ludicrous pickaninny. Two have really important parts, with lots of lines and plenty of acting. These are the disputed children, precociously played by Marie Bianchi and Thomas Gillen. The herculean Curtis Cooksey could have no more fitting part than that of Pug. Mention should be made of Louis Albertini, in a comedy portrayal of a Canadian habitant; of Edward Snader as Selectman McCullom, and of Lilian Dix and Carolyn Lee, as two of the village tabbies. The audience was not large, but was generous in evidences of enjoyment.

CHAUFFEUR AND AUTO MISSING

Mrs. W. A. Stickney Asks Police to Search for ex-Soldier.

Mrs. William A. Stickney, 4954 Lindell boulevard, last night asked police to find her chauffeur, an ex-soldier, who had been gassed and shell-shocked in France. He disappeared with her automobile at 3 p. m. yesterday.

She told the police she feared he had driven off while suffering temporary aberration and might be found driving aimlessly about the country roads. She said that she telephoned to the garage for the machine and waited at a window for its arrival. He drove up to the residence. When she went out a few seconds later he had disappeared with the machine.

FOOD CONSERVATION—CAMPAIGN SPEAKER

Mrs. Edith Barriger.

WEDNESDAY CLUB TO AID HOOVER CAMPAIGN

Members Will Make Speeches and Work for Food Conservation to Help Europeans.

MRS. CLAY JORDAN, who is chairman of the Civic Section of the Wednesday Club, has enlisted the co-operation of members of the club for Conservation Week for World Relief which began its nation-wide campaign yesterday. The Federal Food Administration for St. Louis has had many requests for speakers to appear before meetings of various women's organizations who can present Herbert Hoover's appeal to American women to aid the starving people of Europe and the Wednesday Club women will speak before these meetings provided the influenza ban does not restrict them. The necessity of further conservation and the fact that we are still urged to deny ourselves many articles of food may be hard to realize, but it is hoped to bring the message to every home during this week and to use Mr. Hoover's own words we are told "that we must create a common recognition of world obligation, and such an intelligent world conscience in the American people must be the main dependence of the stricken countries of the world until normal conditions are once more restored."

Mrs. Roscoe D. Smith has charge of the booking of the Wednesday Club members for this work and among the prominent women who have already offered their services are Meses, Edith Barriger, George Payne, W. B. Weston, George Tittman, Francis G. Eaton, John Hornbrook, W. N. Matthews, William H. Elliott, George Dock, Robert Atkinson, Thomas Ratcliffe, A. R. Smyth, J. W. Lee, Augustus Abbott, E. Bradley, Alfonso de Figueiredo, E. A. Fusz, Herbert S. Gardner, Archer O'Reilly, F. H. Dodge, Edgar Rombauer, Misses Grace Burnham, Maud Hoff, Mabel Evans, Clara McCluney, Dorothy Mills and Martha G. McCauley.

Social Items

Mr. and Mrs. William S. McChesney Jr., of 4406 McPherson avenue, who departed last week for Washington, D. C., expect to return home in a few days.

Mrs. Ernest R. Kroeger of 4483 McPherson avenue, departed today for New York, Washington, Boston and other Eastern cities in the interest of the Junior Red Cross, of which she is head of the Southwestern Division. While in Boston Mrs. Kroeger will visit her daughter, Miss Louise Kroeger, who is studying voice culture, and Miss Eleanor Kroeger, who is doing Government work there. She expects to be absent about two weeks.

Mrs. Auguste Chouteau of 4943 Maryland place, accompanied by her two young sons, returned several days ago from Old Sweet Springs, W. Va., where she has been occupying a cottage since August. Mrs. Chouteau entertained with several house parties during her stay there, the guests numbering friends and relatives from Virginia, which was Mrs. Chouteau's former home.

Mrs. Ella Haynes Laughlin, who resides with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Laughlin at "Loch-Lin" in St. Louis County, departed today for Houston, Tex., where she will spend the winter months. She will also visit in Galveston before returning.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lockett Edwards have closed their home "Dear-tome" in Kirkwood and with their family are occupying an apartment at 4917 Argyle place for the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, who departed a few weeks ago for Hot Springs, Ark., are still sojourning there.

Mrs. Charles Sommer of 4248 Maryland avenue, accompanied by her two children, departed yesterday for Galveston, Tex., where they will be the guests of Mr. Sommer's mother for a month. Mr. Sommer will join them there for the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Montague Lyon of 5865 Cates avenue, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Mildred Lyon, has returned from Chicago, where she went to meet her son, Montague Lyon Jr., who was en route from Camp Don-woodie, Minneapolis, where he has been stationed, to Miami, Fla. He is a member of the flying school.

The Liederkranz Club has sent out notices of its opening concert of the season, which will be given next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, to be followed by a dinner. Louis Kreidler, baritone of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, will be the soloist, assisted by the Liederkranz chorus, and an unusually delightful program has been arranged.

AS we stated above, they come to us much underprice, and while they are worth a lot more than $19.95, as in the Dresses that are going to be on special sale Tuesday at $12.95 (see announcement on page 7 of this paper, it's the "Garland Way" to sell as we buy, so this brings them down from their rightful worth to $19.95.

Velours, Mostly

BUT what better, or more desirable fabric can one ask for in a Winter Coat that will combine style with comfort, warmth and service, especially when a goodly percentage have big fur collars, and others beavertext plush collars?

THOSE with self collars, the collars are big, wide, convertible ones that one can "snuggle" down in and they'll defy the blizzards. They all have big, deep pockets and deep cuffs. Some are full belted, others only semi-belted.

Colors include green, brown, navy, taupe, gray and black. Wonderfully smart Coats and wonderful in quality of fabric and tailoring.

Analysis of One's Own Weakness as the First Step Toward Happiness

If We Know What Is Our Greatest Defect, Says Woman Writer, We at Least Have the Chance to Work a Cure.

By DOROTHY DIX.

Do you ever sit down calmly and quietly and try to find out what is the greatest defect in your character? No. It hurts our vanity too badly when we try to vivisection our own weaknesses, so we lay the blame of our failures and our unhappiness on luck, on social conditions, on other people, and let it go at that.

Yet if we knew what was our greatest defect we would have diagnosed our case and found what ailed us, and at least have a chance to cure it, so it is really worth while to investigate the subject.

Perhaps your greatest defect is laziness. You have never admitted that to yourself, but you have got that chronically tired feeling that makes you loaf and invite your soul instead of rolling up your sleeves and tackling a job as if you meant business. You are never quite on time in the morning, and you work with one eye on the clock, and are the first to leave in the evening.

You never do one lick more of labor than you are paid for. You never really put your back into your task. You never have any interest in what you are doing or any enthusiasm over it, and yet you wonder why it is that you never succeed when the reason for your failure is as plain as a pike staff. It's because you are lazy, and laziness is a perfectly curable disease as soon as you quit camouflaging it as the artistic temperament or delicate health.

Perhaps your greatest defect is lack of grit and staying power. You are a poor, miserable quitter. As soon as you strike the hard sledding that it takes endurance and courage to pull through, you throw up your hands and give up.

You have tried half a dozen different professions into which you entered with high hopes and enthusiasm. You were sure you had found just the thing that suited you at last, and you were sure to win fame and fortune.

Perhaps you would, if you had stuck, but you didn't. The minute your new occupation ceased to thrill you with its novelty you grew tired. When you found that to achieve success any line means long, hard, consistent drudgery, ceaseless striving, and heart-breaking anxiety, you quit cold. You wouldn't pay the price of victory.

You have never gotten anywhere in life. You have stood still and have seen hundreds of people, with a tenth of your natural ability pass you in the race, and you don't understand it, yet there would be no mystery in it to you if you would face the fact that the reason you have failed is because you have a spinal column about the size and firmness of a silk thread.

Perhaps your greatest defect is being a waster. You spend money as if it grew on trees. You have no idea of the value of money, and you have never looked out for the future, but let each day take care of itself. The pennies have slipped through your loose fingers, as if they were so much water.

Opportunity has come your way, but one's big chance nearly always has a price mark on it. You couldn't take advantage of the opportunity you had to go into business for yourself because you didn't have the money to swing it. You couldn't take advantage of the chance you had to make a neat little turn in a speculation, in which you would have been let in on the ground floor by a friend, because you didn't have any money to put into it.

You haven't had a chance to even get a better job because you didn't have enough money saved to risk being out of employment for a few months. You can't even take the rest you need when you are sick because you haven't the price.

Yet you always have been a good money-maker, and you are headed for the poor house or dependence on your children in your old age because you've always been a waster. All that has stood between you and riches has been the hole in your pocket that you could have sewed up if you had only recognized the fatal flaw in your own character.

Perhaps your greatest defect is a high temper. That has stood between you and success in business advancement, because a high-tempered man or woman cannot be trusted not to spill the beans in some moment of rage. It has kept you from executive positions because those who cannot control themselves can never control others.

Worse still, it has ruined your home life. Your wife and children they do not love you because they are afraid of your rages. If you are a woman your husband dreads to put his key in the latch at night. Home to him means just one scene after another.

Your husband and children may know that you love them well enough to die for them, and that you may have every other virtue under the sun, but if you give way to your temper they think of you as nothing but a shrew and a virago. Let us all consider our defects—and correct them.

The Sandman Story for Tonight

By MRS. F. A. WALKER.

Puss' Spectacles.

PUSS wondered why her master and mistress always put on their spectacles when they sat down at night to read, and one day when she and Rover were sitting alone by the fire in the sitting room she asked him, thinking he was wise enough to know everything.

"To see with, of course," said Rover, in reply to her question. "They can read better with spectacles on. You can see things quicker than without them."

"Could you see mice in the wall if you wore spectacles?" asked Puss.

"Oh, dear, no! You cannot see through the wall, Puss," said Rover. "Spectacles make things look bigger and plainer, but you can't see things that are out of sight, you know."

"I can't see that they are much good, then," said Puss. "I can see a mouse quick enough, but I thought I could see the next time she left them on the kitchen table."

Puss began to think about the spectacles, and one day she decided she would borrow her mistress's glasses the next time she left them on the kitchen table.

She did not have long to wait, for her mistress went to town one day and forgot her spectacles, and Puss perving about came upon them.

"Ah! Now is my time to try them on," she said.

Puss sat up on the table in front of the window and put on the spectacles. A bird hopping around in the yard outside suddenly looked so near that Puss thought if the window had not been between them she might have caught it.

"I'll just wear these spectacles for a while and sit in the pantry door. I shall be sure to catch more mice that way, as Rover said, for things a long way off certainly do look near."

Puss reasoned, as she thought, in a very wise way, but she did not remember that though the object she saw might appear to be near by, it really would be some distance away from her.

PUSS calmly sat down on the pantry floor, with the spectacles on, to watch for the mice.

She did not have to wait long, for a little white fellow came out of a hole and ran across the floor, and to Puss he seemed so near she put out her paw to tap him, and down it went on the floor, and the mouse under it.

Just then the little mouse who had not seen Puss ran around the flour barrel, and Puss, through the spectacles, was sure he was more than he was. So she gave a spring, but away went the mouse and up against a pile of tins fell Puss, and over came the tins with such a clatter that Rover came running from the other room to see what had happened.

Puss was crawling out from under the tins when Rover came into the pantry. The spectacles had been knocked off and Rover saw them on the floor. He picked them up and said, "Oh, I see! You have been trying

Husbands and Wives We Know

By Nicola Greeley-Smith.

The Woman With the Chatelaine Husband.

It was the custom of our mothers and grandmothers to wear about their waists a sort of belt with many dangling silver chains, to which were attached keys, garden scissors and a variety of other small household tools which might be needed during the day. This belt, as everybody will remember, was called a chatelaine. The custom, long since discarded by the majority of women, is still followed by a limited number of wealthy wives, the more or less shamefaced possessors of what I call chatelaine husbands—men without ambition or occupation, who are content to help in spending money they did not earn.

I am far from accepting the gold standard in its application to the worth of men. I refuse to call a man successful just because he is able to make much money, or unsuccessful because he was born without that special aptitude. But I have seen too many men disintegrate under the weight of wealth acquired by marriage not to regard the chatelaine husband as the most miserable specimen of his sex.

The normal young man feels an instinctive aversion from acquiring such supposedly "easy money," which is really the hardest of all money to earn.

There is always something just a little bit below the standard of average masculine excellence in the chatelaine husband, even when he takes the first step in his career of ornamentation.

He may have a job at that time, but he does not enjoy it. The hours are too long, the pay too small to enable him to purchase $4 neckties and $12 shirts. And, of course, he has to get up at the same time every morning whether he feels like it or not. And, then, too, he is convinced that every advancement in his office is the result of "pull" and that honest merit such as his will never be discovered or rewarded.

In this phase of his development he is just as easy to fall in love with a rich girl as a poor one. And he begins to treat the young woman employed about him with a certain disdain.

It is actually quite easy for him to love any woman to whom self-interest points the way. So he finds her, marries her and informs everybody that "I'll never touch a penny of her money." It is, therefore, rather astonishing to his fellow workers to see him appear within a few months in a seal-lined overcoat. They are constrained also to observe that he does not get down to work in the mornings as early or as frequently as before the wedding.

Even the "boss" marvels at the remarkable increase in the number of his colds and headaches since he became a chatelaine husband.

But even this irregular attendance at his work interferes new and then with his wife's plans. "I want you to take me to lunch today and you know you can't get back to that office at 1 o'clock," she says plaintively. "I don't see anything of you at all, and why do you suppose I married you if not to have somebody to take me around?"

Oh, yes, the wife of the chatelaine husband has much to answer for in his debacle.

Eventually he announces that he is going to resign his job, which is too confining and is wrecking his health, and that hereafter they will have to live on what he can make at writing or painting, occupations for which he considers himself to be equally fitted. Sometimes he does resign. Oftener he is discharged for neglecting his work. And thereafter his only occupation is described vaguely as "looking after Mathilda's estate."

There are not, thank heaven, very many chatelaine husbands in the United States.

Some biologists tell us that originally the male was a very much smaller and less developed organism than the female, and sometimes was even carried around by her in a sort of pocket provided by nature for the purpose. In that case the chatelaine husband may be simply a reversion to type.

Continue to save food.

Food conservation is necessary even since peace is declared. Many parts of the world face actual famine. Waste in American homes will mean hunger in other homes. For humanity's sake, conserve food.

"Yes, ma'am—it's the best."

The grocer knows the flour situation—now, as always, there is cheap, good and best quality flour—and Valier's Community comes in at the head.

Its best because we pay a premium price to get the highest grade wheat and mill it by the Valier slow process to save the full baking quality. Silk sifting makes the texture fine, its clean, white, speckless texture will delight you. It bakes beautifully.

The price of Valier's Community Flour is regulated by the Government. It is more economical than ordinary flour, because it makes more successful baking and more baking per sack. Buy a 24-lb. sack at our daily money refunded if you're not delighted. Ask your grocer.

The way is won! We are going to again make Valier's Community Flour and as soon as the Government permits. Then you can buy the flour of flour.

THE GILDED MAN

A Romance of the Andes

By CLIFFORD SMYTH

AGAIN he saw himself with Gen. Herran, stopping on the Honda road to exchange those fatal civilities, and immediately after, the noise and confusion of the marching volunteers, with their threats of vengeance against the Yankees. Back of this came the quiet march with Herran. He recalled their talk, something of their friendly disputes. The effort to do this bewildered him. It seemed as if he were stepping from one world into another. Everything was merged into one gigantic figure of Raoul, a Raoul towering above him, concentrating himself upon him, dominating him until all else faded away and he was stepping in a dreamless sleep, filled only with that word of command—"Remember!"

How long he remained in this state of unconsciousness—for it was that rather than sleep—he did not know. It might have been years, it might have been a mere moment of time. When the spell was finally broken by Raoul the scene that met his awakened senses puzzled him. He was in Sajipona's palace, in the room where Raoul had confronted and subdued him. But it was all unfamiliar. His mind was filled with his mission to Bogota. His parting with Una in the sunny courtyard of the inn came back to him, irradiating a dreamy happiness. He had been through some strange experiences since then, he knew. The sight of the hangings under which he was reclining, the great spaces of the room, the softened light of the cave, kept alive the memory of many a novel, fantastic adventure.

Shaking off his drowsiness, he sprang to his feet. Sajipona and Raoul advanced to meet him. Sajipona! Yes, he remembered her. She was the beautiful Indian Queen he was to marry in his dream—it must have been a dream, because Una was not there; except that, at the very last, he remembered—Una—had stepped in for just a moment—and he had not known her! How amazed, angry, she must have been! And then—what else could have been expected?—she had gone away. He was anxious now for her safety, although how she could possibly be in this cave, how she could have found her way here, was a hopeless puzzle. The first word he uttered was a cry to Sajipona:

"Where is Una?"

Raoul would have answered, but Sajipona checked him. She realized the full significance of David's question, although outwardly she showed nothing of her emotion.

"You are yourself again—I am glad," she said.

"But Una—"

"She is safe. She reached Bogota after you left Honda."

David's relief was evident, although his eyes showed the perplexity arising from his strange awakening. "I thought she had found her way here," he said. Then he turned again to Sajipona, this time with an impulsive gesture of gratitude. "I remember everything now. You saved my life. Every moment with you has been filled with happiness. How can I ever be grateful enough for the kindness you have shown me?"

He knelt before her, kissing her hand. She smiled; her other hand rested upon his shoulder.

"Grateful!" she exclaimed playfully. "Have we not a lifetime together before us? Have you forgotten the festival that awaits us on the top of the mountain?"

"No, I have not forgotten."

"Do you want it to take place?"

He arose to his feet, clasping his hands over his eyes as if to fix an uncertain impression. When he bared his face before her again there was quiet determination in his glance. Again he took her hand in his pressing it to his lips. Then, with eyes fixed full upon hers, he answered her question:

"Yes."

XXII.

A PEOPLE'S DESTINY.

MIRANDA and, in a lesser degree those who were with him in the palace garden, were indignant at their enforced separation from Una and Sajipona. The doctor, priding himself especially on Raoul's discomfiture, considered the Queen guilty of the basest ingratitude, and even suspected that she might be, at that moment, plotting their destruction. Leighton and Herran scoffed at this, but it appealed to Mrs. Quayle, and that lady, clinging nervously to Andrew, followed Miranda's explosive talk with appreciative horror. This proving a profitless diversion, however, Leighton proposed the adoption of a plan for immediate action. An attack on the palace, or a retreat that would bring them to the entrance of the cave, were alternately considered. But as both plans seemed to leave Una out of their reach, they were discarded as impossible, and it looked as if they would have to settle down to an indefinite stay in the garden. In the midst of the discussion the doors of the palace were thrown open and Narva and Una hurried out to meet them. Still fearing ambushes and other undefinable treacheries, Miranda, dressed by no means ready to throw aside his caution at their approach. But the aged sibyl's lofty disdain was disconcerting, nor was there any resisting the whole-hearted joy with which Una greeted them.

To their eager inquiries she gave the briefest replies. For one thing, she assured them that they had Sajipona's promise that their escape from the cave would be easy and not too long delayed. Of the Queen's friendly disposition towards them, she said, there was not the slightest doubt. They could count on the carrying out of her promise if, on their side, the conditions she proposed were observed. These conditions were: never, once they were out of it, to enter the cave again; to reveal nothing of their experiences during their present adventure; and to keep an absolute silence regarding Sajipona's relationship to this mysterious race of people.

Beyond this Una would say little. The conditions were joyfully accepted. Nothing, certainly, could ever induce them to enter the cave again. But then—there was David. Yes, Una admitted, David was in the palace. She had seen him. He was free, so far as she knew, to come or go as he chose. But he had not said he would return with them. It might be, indeed, that he would choose to live permanently with the cave-men—an amazing possibility that started an avalanche of questions to which only the vaguest answers were given. Doubtless they would see David before they left, Una assured them, and learn for themselves all they wished to know. As for Raoul, she could tell nothing. He was, apparently, in favor of the Queen, and engaged in some undertaking for her.

Una betrayed none of her suspicions regarding David in her disquiet of these matters. She had not seen him since that first meeting in the little portico adjoining his quarters in the palace, hence she was ignorant of the result of Raoul's experiment. Sajipona had come to her immediately after his conclusion and, judging by the quiet cheerfulness of her manner, she fancied everything had gone to her satisfaction. This was confirmed by the announcement of the festival that was shortly to take place. This festival, Una had been told, was to be the occasion for great rejoicing among the cave people. It was a sort of national day, a celebration that had not been held in many a long generation. It was intended to recall, she heard, the ancient feast of El Dorado, the Gilded Man, about which, of course, as it existed among the Chibchas before the period of the Spanish invasion, Una was familiar through the traditions as told by David and Leighton. What form this revival of the old ceremonies would take had not been explained. But it piqued her curiosity in spite of resentment and wounded pride, she cherished a secret hope that it would bring about a final understanding of David's position in regard to Sajipona and herself. She felt sure David would be at the festival, and she had an intuitive feeling as well that his presence would dispel the mystery that surrounded them. She did not look forward, nor did she consciously want a reconciliation. Bitterly she denied herself the possibility of one. But she wished to know definitely, and to its full extent, David's faithfulness to her. After she had learned this, they could not start on their homeward journey too quickly.

SILL absorbed in these reflections, Una and her companions, under Narva's lead, entered the great court of the palace. Una, of course, had grown familiar with the strange features to be found in the hall of marvels; but the others, entering it for the first time, were amazed at what they saw there. In Leighton this feeling of wonder reached its highest pitch. The shattering of one scientific belief after another that he had experienced ever since entering the cave left him, it is true, somewhat callous to new impressions. But this apathy, if it can be called that, melted away as he stood beneath the great white dome that soared in flashing lines above them. Looking up at the huge ball of fire suspended just beyond the apex of this dome, for a moment he remained speechless. Then, turning to his companions, he voiced the ecstasy that comes with some unexpected, epoch-making discovery.

"Do you know what that is?" he demanded.

No one did. Miranda shrugged his shoulders and turned his attention ostentatiously elsewhere, as if floating balls of crackling white flames, used to illuminate caves were matters of ordinary experience with him. Andrew's mouth was opened quite as wide as his eyes as he stood staring upward at the curious illumination. It would be a splendid saving of candle power, he thought, more than enough for the whole village, if they could only manage to take it back with them to Rysdale. But, even if it were small enough, it wouldn't be possible to carry in one of their trunks, since it would be sure to set things on fire. This objection was made by Mrs. Quayle, and seemed reasonable enough.

"That is the most remarkable thing on earth," went on Leighton, heedless, in his excitement, of the frivolous comments of his companions. "I have often thought that sooner or later something like this would be discovered."

It is impossible to estimate its value. Why, all the billions of dollars that there are in the world today could not pay for it at the present market prices.

This calm assurance with which this estimate was given shattered Miranda's pose of studied indifference.

"What is it?" he asked sharply. "Radium!"

Those Cornhuskers Appear to Have All the Ear-Marks of a Great Football Team

NEBRASKA PROTEST EFFORT TO WEAKEN WASHINGTON TEAM

Rutherford Says He Will Use Simpson, Evans, Busick, Feuerborn Next Saturday.

NO TITLE IS AT STAKE

Championship Not Possible Under Conditions This Year—Basketball Work to Begin.

Reports of that Thanksgiving day battle between the Pikers and Billings evidently have reached Lincoln, Neb., for the Nebraska Cornhuskers have inaugurated a campaign calculated to so weaken Coach Rutherford's eleven it would hardly be capable of putting up a fight in the contest next Saturday. Nebraska's particular trouble seems to lie in the fact that they do not relish a conflict against the Pikers with Eber Simpson, Joe Evans, Urban Busick and Bill Feuerborn in the latter's lineup.

Coach Rutherford yesterday received a message from Nebraska protesting against the playing of this quartet. They contend the boys are not eligible to participate in a game for the Missouri Valley Conference championship, since two of them are professional baseball players and the remaining two are playing beyond the four-year limit.

Rutherford answers protest. The Cornhuskers point out that if the above mentioned quartet is used by Rutherford, the game cannot be considered a championship affair. They are willing that Rutherford should claim the title if he succeeds in beating them minus the services of four potent cogs in the Parkway machine—a task the local member admits is highly improbable, though not impossible.

Rutherford has countered with the assertion that he most positively will use the four players, each of whom played an important role in the downfall of the Billings. The coach says Nebraska has no basis whatever for a protest, since the Cornhuskers are using S. A. T. C. men this year, regardless of their ability. On this basis, Rutherford is justified in using Simpson, Evans, Busick and Feuerborn, since they are members of the S. A. T. C. So far as a championship is concerned, Rutherford points out that the title has never been officially awarded, though claimed annually by the team having the best record for the season. Hence, he says, even if the Pikers win the game, they will be acclaimed champions by popular opinion only.

BASKET BALL PRACTICE OPENS AT WASHINGTON

Coach Rutherford announced he would start basketball practice this week. A call will be issued for candidates, though real work is not expected to begin until after the football game with Nebraska, since many basketball players are on the gridiron squad at present and cannot find time for both games.

TECH TO BE STRONGER THAN EVER NEXT YEAR

Stars of 1917 Will Return From Army to Strengthen 1919 Football Squad.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 2.—Georgia Tech's prospects for 1919 are for a return of the famous "Golden Tornado" of 1917, which raised such havoc in football circles generally, plus the seasoning of the freshmen of this year's promising eleven.

Tech will have a well coached, experienced, heavy, fast eleven in 1919, probably superior to the eleven of last year, and at least six touchdowns better than this year's eleven. If the talk that is going around the country to the effect that this year's play will not be counted as one of a player's allotted three years activity proves to be true, Tech will not lose a single man from this year's eleven. If it is not so, then Capt. Bill Fincher, Tech end, and Joe Guyon, the Indian back, played their last games in a Tech uniform on Thanksgiving day.

But to make up for their losses Strupp, Tech's all-American halfback, Harlan and Guill, fullbacks (both in the navy), and Hill, quarterback, are expected to return. Strupp, Harlan and Hill will have one more year, while Guill has two.

In the line it is confidently expected that "Pup" Phillips, now a "Devil Dog" and regarded as the greatest center the South has ever seen, will be returned, as well as Higgins and Bell, the regular ends of the 1917 team. Weichel, Dowling and Rogers, first string guards.

PETERSON OPENS STAND IN BUFFALO TONIGHT

Charles C. Peterson, noted local coach, left here yesterday for Buffalo, N. Y., where tonight he will open a two weeks' engagement at the Hippodrome Parlor. Peterson will give exhibitions of his fancy shots and meet all comers at ballkline and three cushions.

Subsequent to his Buffalo stand, Peterson expects to make a short tour of New York State. He will be gone about a month, depending upon conditions in the East.

Bowling Entries Close.

Entries for the War Camp Community Service benefit bowling tournament will not close until next Friday, with the event scheduled to open on the different drives Dec. 12.

Hot Off the Gridiron

Pittsburg University's defeat of Saturday by the Cleveland Naval Reserve furnishes more testimony to the fact that the best team doesn't always win, in the football world of today. Time was when the score of a gridiron contest was almost exactly a measure of its relative ability as compared with its foe.

Saturday at Cleveland Pittsburg's stronger eleven lost, 10-9, to the Navals, although they made a clean march for a touchdown and were within two inches of earning another when the whistle blew. Apparently a fair comparison of the real strength of the teams would be indicated by a score of 18 to 3. It was a chance fumble and a forward pass that gave the Navals their only touchdown.

Pittsburg was playing its third hard game in seven days. It's just as well for the reputation of the jacks that their team will be unable to grant the Pittsburg eleven a return contest.

Service eleven will see in this victory an opportunity to clinch their claim to supremacy over the intercollegiate eleven of the year.

In its face, this victory gives the Great Lakes a strong claim on the United States championship, with the Municipal Pier eleven of Chicago unbeaten and probably fully as strong. The Pier team beat the Cleveland Jacks, 6-0.

But it is entirely probable that Pittsburg, primed for a title battle, would beat Great Lakes two or three touchdowns; and that its closest rival for the national gridiron title would prove to be the Navy, which was the most painful example of a good team in hard luck furnished by any football contest this year. (Just as the Navy was about to score a second touchdown and clinch its victory over Great Lakes by a 12-0 score, a mid-field fumbled behind his own goal line and Elsieon of the Chicago team ran for a touchdown.)

WRAY'S COLUMN

Baseball Girds on Its Armor.

AFTER several days of unwonted silence, Byron B. Johnson, president of the American League and the only autocrat in the world today who is not unceasingly asking if his crown is on straight, broke his silence on the subject of Mr. Harry Frazee and the "one-man national commission," with William Howard Taft sitting in as the singular solon.

Ban dismissed Mr. Frazee and his form and the curtailing of the powers of the Board of Directors, whose authority in the past has made the part of the league's executive a mere hand-picked, pomp-dispensing one, instead of a man's job.

Heydler Has Earned It.

ALL a National League president need be, the reactionaries hold, is a fine figure of a man with a large portico and a friendly smile. Ricks, Heydler's long experience with the club and his work in the job—and he himself was qualified to have filled it. Branch, in form, could sell a tin Elizabeth to Henry Ford himself, or make the Kaiser believe in the league of peace.

It had been planned to campaign Branch, but the uncertainty of his term of absence makes it probable that the field of candidates will consist of Brown of Louisville, acting President Heydler and John B. Foster, secretary of the Giants.

Brown seems to have no right to ask the position; John B. Foster is qualified to hold it but Heydler's long experience with the club and his work in the job—and he himself was qualified to have filled it. Branch, in form, could sell a tin Elizabeth to Henry Ford himself, or make the Kaiser believe in the league of peace.

Taft Too Big for Berth.

BAN paid a tribute to Mr. Taft's commanding personality, and insinuated that the former President, in importance, was out of all proportion to the nature of the position offered him.

Johnson further advanced the belief that Mr. Taft would refuse to have anything to do with the baseball proposition when he learned the nature of the difficulties—a belief which proved Johnson to be a prophet, as Mr. Taft Saturday announced he would not accept the offer of Frazee.

In short, it was plain that the autocrat of the baseball world loomed lightly and will "rest" heavily upon any project of Messrs. Frazee and Heydler, when the American League meets Dec. 10.

Big Ban did not say this, but we will do it for him: That the one-man commission is already in existence, with Byron B. Johnson playing the role of the commissioner.

It may be added that, in the main, Mr. Johnson's shepherding of his trust has been satisfactory, to all but Mr. Frazee.

The Next N. L. President.

NEITHER Major Branch Rickey nor Lieut. Colonel Tim Huston will be in this country in time to participate in the coming December baseball conferences, from which it may be taken for granted that the announced baseball "housecleaning" will not take place as forecast by Johnny Evers, the $100 a week Welfare Director, and fresh-from-the-front author, now in France.

Col. Huston's interest in baseball it now appears is limited to a desire to dispose of his New York stock. But Branch Rickey's absence is unfortunate, as this live wire was prepared to make a real fight for the modernization of the parent league, and for taking the grand old ladies out of it. Branch was planning a fight for re-102 yards for a touchdown and victory, 7-6.

Admittedly Navy is two touchdowns better than Great Lakes, and Pitt three touchdowns better than Cleveland, it appears a toss-up for first honors this year between the machines of Doble and Warner.

Nebraska University is, of course, justified in its protest against the coming game with Washington being alluded to as an intercollegiate championship contest. Several players of the Parkway team would be ineligible under strict rule interpretations.

The event should be known as "Valley Conference S. A. T. C. championship," with no intercollegiate title awarded. None of the games this year having been played under conference conditions, there is no legal way in which recognition could be given to any contest this season.

Allen Lincoln, the 264-pound, 18-year-old backfield star of the Webster Groves eleven, has played his last football game as a preparatory school player. He has already been pledged by a Columbia fraternity and will be an asset of the first water to the football, basketball and athletic teams. Lincoln for three years has been the mainstay of the track, basketball and football squads that have won headlines for Coach Roberts' aggregations in past seasons. Lincoln and Wright, his fellow halfback, both made application for the navy last September, but were put on the waiting list.

Frederic Schurman of Cornell has given the athletic associations and alumni of the 500 colleges and universities of the country something to think about, in his proposal to substitute military and compulsory physical training for intercollegiate sports.

He thinks that contests between class and department teams would furnish sufficient competitive interest to stimulate the student activity.

HIGH SCHOOLS ARRANGE TO PLAY NEXT SATURDAY

High school football games will not be interfered with under the present quarantine restrictions, according to F. C. Voss, an official of the Inter-scholastic League. Consequently, arrangements are being made to carry out next Saturday's program and the school eleven will continue practice.

CARDINALS HAVE 16 PLAYERS IN SERVICE

103 Tossers of National With Uncle Sam's Forces, Heydler's List Shows.

That 103 players, or 64 per cent of the tossers, who were members of National League clubs, were in the country's service when the armistice with Germany was signed is disclosed by the official list of men in the United States service, made public today by John Heydler, acting president of the senior circuit.

Of this total, 42 were drafted into the army; 22 volunteered for the army; 33 enlisted in the navy and seven in the aviation service. The list shows that 16 Cardinals were in the service, 8 drafted; army volunteers; three navy and 1 aviation.

The Cardinals in the service are: DRAFTED: Tony Brotem, Douglass, Wally, Walter, Oles, Horstman, Jake May, Jack Smith, Frank Snyder and Bill Sherdel. ARMY VOLUNTEERS: Clifton Heathcote, Roy Jenkins, E. Knight and Murphy Currie. NAVY: Jack Miller, John Brock and Alvin.

AVIATION: Marvin Goodwin, Pittsburg and Brooklyn, with 13 each, have the greatest number of stars in the service. Cincinnati has only six, four drafted and two army volunteers.

Heydler's list also shows that two players have made the supreme sacrifice. One is Capt. Eddie Grant and the other Marcus Milligan, a rookie, who was with the Pirates.

Following is a table showing the number of men each club had in the service and the branch:

CLUBS.	Total.	Army.	Navy.	Avia.
Boston	18	10	8	0
Brooklyn	18	10	8	0
Chicago	11	4	7	0
Cincinnati	11	4	7	0
New York	12	4	8	0
Pittsburg	18	10	8	0

FIFTEEN TEAMS START IN SIX-DAY BICYCLE RACE

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Fifteen teams of the best cyclists available started last night in the international six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden. Among the competitors this year are several who took part in previous years. The new newcomers, notably Gus Lang, the American amateur champion, and Lloyd Byron, holder of the Australian amateur title.

The following is the official list of entries: Australian team, Hill and Grenda; United States Navy-Belgian team, Carman and De Baetes; American-Australian team, Corry and Maden; amateur team, Lang and Byron; Newark team, Kopsky and Coburn; Submarine Boat Corporation team, Grimm and Tamm; California team, Hamely and Lawrence; New York team—Chapman and Halstead; Italian team, Madona and Bello; Union Sportive Italian team, Verr and Drobach; American team, McNamara and Magin; American-French team, Kramer and Dupuy; Jersey team, Weber and Eaton; Long Island team, Bowker brothers; Allied team, Gerwig and Keller.

Thirteen of the 15 teams had covered 167 miles and 7 laps at 8 o'clock this morning. The brothers Rowker and Bello and Markey were one lap behind the leaders. The eight-hour record made here by Lawson and Drobach in 1914 is 159 miles and 3 laps.

The Grandma League is trying. To wish a job on Taft; A job's there's no denying. Would be the softest graft. While William's firm and steady. And dignified withal. We'd like to see old Teddy In baseball put the "bawl."

With tennis on the hummer And football on the wane. We yearn for good old summer And baseball games again. We long to see the bleachers And hear the welkin ring; And all the old-time features 'N' umps, 'n' everything.

We'll root for our tail-enders. And holler, "Atta boy!" The pesky peanut vendors, We'll even greet with joy. The fans with hope unfailing Will fill the vacant tiers And back behind the railing The gay old gamblers.

Qualified.

Ban Johnson says there are no two men in baseball who know less about the rules governing the commission than Messrs. Frazee and Hempstead. They ought to make good umpires.

According to the opinion of the majority of the ball players there are no persons who know as little about the rules of baseball as the umpires. The arbiters, on the other hand, figure that the majority of ball

SOCCER TEAMS SCORED ONE GOAL IN 2 HOURS

Innisfaills Tied Millers, While Screw Co. Downed Scullins, 1-0, Yesterday.

Tight defensive play featured the games played yesterday in the St. Louis Soccer League at Cardinal Field, when only one goal was scored in two hours of battling. In the opener the Innisfaills and Ben Millers battled to a scoreless tie, while in the second, the St. Louis Screw Co. trimmed the Scullins, 1-0. The play was easily the best that has been seen this season.

One injury marred the contests, that coming in the battle between the Irishmen and Millers, when inside Right Forward Fink of the leaders had his nose broken shortly before the end of hostilities. Fink was hit squarely in the face when one of the Hatters cleared a shot.

For the first part of the contest, the Millers clearly outplayed Foley's charges, but great work by Barnett, Holland, O'Leary and O'Neil kept them from scoring. In the opening half alone, the Millers received 17 corner kicks. The Millers' backfield also put up some classy soccer.

Tate Brady Flare Goal. In the closing clash, both the Screw Co. and Scullins showed changed lineups. For the victors, Johnny Miller was moved to a forward position, while Kavanaugh was used in the halfback line. Manager Tate Brady played goal for the Scullins, with Flavin taking his place at fullback.

Bechtold, the fleet center forward of the Screw Co., counted the only goal, after 20 minutes of play, in the closing period. A few minutes before, the Scullins counted, but the goal was not allowed, as Referee Basco, who handled the game because of the illness of Phil Kavanaugh, ruled that Craddock had been charged before he handled the ball.

The standings:

CLUBS.	Won.	Lost.	Tied.	Pts.
Innisfaills	1	0	0	2
Ben Millers	1	0	0	2
St. L. Screw Co.	1	0	0	2

CONSTIPATION IS HUMANITY'S GREATEST FOE

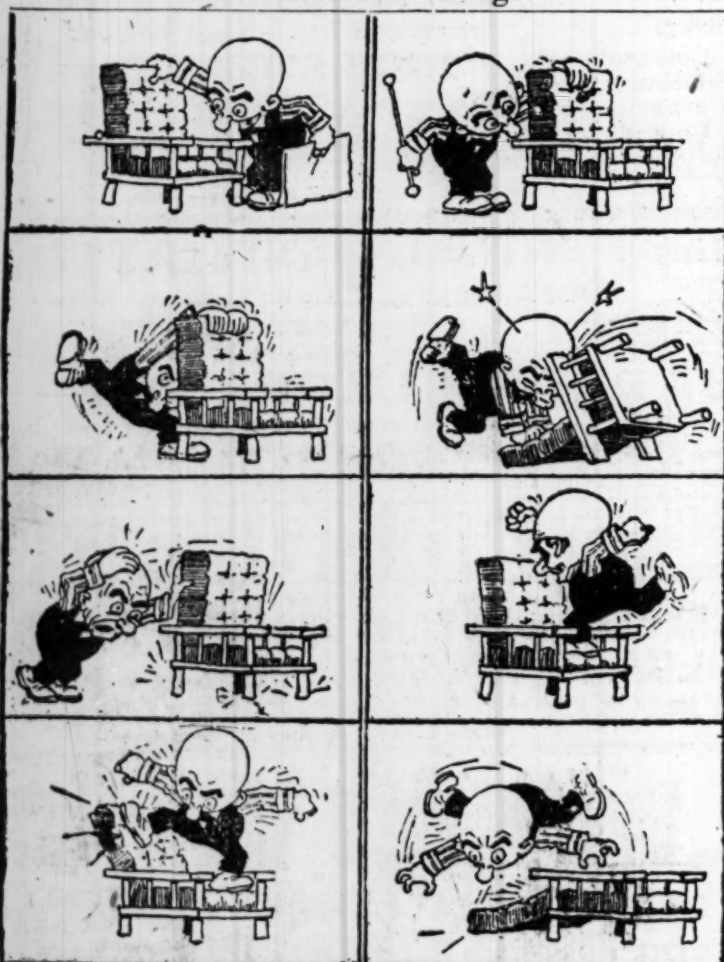

It is always a terror to old people and a nuisance at some time or another to every human being, young or old. It is the forerunner of more ill and suffering than almost any of NATURE'S DANGER SIGNALS and should never be allowed to go unheeded. At the very first indication of constipation get DR. TUTT'S LIVER PILLS which for 72 years has been successfully used for this most prevalent of all disorders. For sale by druggists and dealers everywhere.

The Foolish Creditor.

AN Admiral said the other day: "Those navy contractors who paid graft commissions to middlemen were very foolish, for the Navy has warned contractors time out of time to leave the middleman alone. "Yes," the Admiral went on, "the contractors who have been bamboozled by middlemen are as foolish as the colored gentleman who was overheard to say: "After trying in vain to collect his $4 the colored man consulted a lawyer. "What reason," the lawyer asked, "does the debtor give for not paying his debt?" "Boss," said the colored gentleman anxiously, "he's gimme a mighty good reason, sah. "Well, what is it?" "He done say, boss, dat he's been owin' me dat money so long dat de interest has et it all up."—Washington Star.

"AND when does the wedding take place, Miss Blank?" asked the genial proprietor of the little stationery shop. "The wedding!" exclaimed the young woman, blushing. Why, you don't think?" "Ah, Miss Blank!" rejoined the old bookseller. "When a young lady buys a hundred sheets of paper and only 25 envelopes I know there's something in the wind!"—Tit-Bits.

Habit.

WHILE in a certain Government office recently Sir Evan Jones, the British transport board chairman, overheard the following dialogue between two fair typewriter tappers: "Isn't it terrible the way we have to work these days?" "Rather! Why, I typed so many letters yesterday that last night I finished my prayers with 'Yours truly.'"—Vancouver (B. C.) Province.
